description

Mundus Urbano (MU) is an interdisciplinary Master of Science programme specialising in International Cooperation and Urban Development, jointly offered by four European universities. It addresses the dynamic challenges faced throughout the world due to rapid urbanisation processes. Mundus Urbano produces advanced graduates who can innovatively address the complexities of the phenomena facing the world's urban populations, mostly in developing countries.

After a first year at TU Darmstadt, the consortium structure of the program allows students to pursue a double degree in International Cooperation and Urban Development with specialisations

Master of Sciences in "International Cooperation and Urban Development" in Development Economics (Rome), Sustainable Emergency Architecture (Barcelona) or Urban Planning (Grenoble).
